American Cancer Society Releases New Bulletin

"Six Lives Can Be Saved Every Hour" Is Title Of Cancer Control Pamphlet

The American Cancer Society has just issued a bulletin called "Six Lives Can Be Saved Every Hour," which is designed to help remove the veil of fear and superstition which has surrounded a major cause of death among women. The bulletin is one item in the educational campaign being carried on by the Society, which made a drive during April for $5,000,000 to carry out a national program for public education, research, and the establishment of cancer detection clinics. North Carolina's quota was $135,628.56.

"If you feel a painless lump, or thickening," "If you have a sore that does not heal," "If you notice irregular bleeding or discharge," "If you see progressive change in color or size of a wart, mole, or birthmark," go to your doctor, the pamphlet advised. In a simple statistical table it showed that a high percentage of cures had been effected in certain types of cancer when given early treatment.

The pamphlet can be obtained from the local unit of the Field Army of the American Cancer Society or by writing to the state office of the Society in the Fulton building in Mount Airy. It should be read by every member of every family in the interest of cutting down the mortality caused by cancer, which has taken a higher toll than has been lost to our enemies on the battlefronts.

The Field Army pointed out that "without the discovery of a single new cancer fact, 30 to 50 per cent of potential cancer victims can be saved—through an adequate educational program, adequate detection clinics, and periodic medical examinations." Every individual should have a thorough medical examination at least once a year. Women over 35 should have one every six months.

Grady Contributes To Victory Gardening

Mr. Jess Grady is making his contribution toward gardening by bringing each day healthy Marglobe and Stone tomato plants to the village. Take a peep into his car parked in Revolution each day, and you'll see dozens of plants carefully wrapped in wet soil and paper for successful transplanting.

From tomatoes we get essential vitamin C. Let's plan now to "Eat all we can eat and can all we cannot now eat."

Navy Mail Service Offers Suggestions

If you have a man in the Pacific, here's some news of interest to you about getting mail to him. The Navy mail service suggests:

1. Since newspapers will be months old before they arrive (Okinawa is 5,280 miles from Fleet Post Office, San Francisco), families should clip items of news and interest and enclose them in letter mail, rather than send the whole newspaper.

2. If a man is "guessed" to be in an invasion area, his family and friends should wait for sometime before sending any parcel post packages. And, if he is known to be in the far Pacific, packages with food or perishables should not be sent at all.

3. Send photographs, snapshots and newspaper items to your Bluejacket over seas, and send them in first class mail. Enclosures cannot be sent in V-Mail letters.

4. Use V-Mail as often as possible. Write short, frequent letters. Remember V-Mail has air priority over all other classes of mail in an effort to increase the volume.

Fidelis Class To Meet Next Tuesday, May 8

DAV Sponsors Bill To Aid Dependents

A bill to provide dependency allowances for all service-disabled veterans with families to support has been introduced into Congress under the sponsorship of the Disabled American Veterans.

Milton D. Cohn, national DAV commander, said at present compensation or pension for permanent service incurred disability is based entirely upon the disability itself without regard to the number of persons dependent upon the handicapped veteran.

"The DAV sponsored bill, H. R. 1872," Cohn said, "would make the present disability pension the base rate for a veteran without dependents and add to that additional allowances based on the number of persons dependent upon the handicapped veteran for support. Such a system has been in operation in Canada for several years."

Under the terms of the bill, a totally disabled veteran would receive dependency allowances at the rate of $25 per month for his wife, $15 for one child, $12 for the second child and $10 for each additional child, and $10 a month for each dependent parent. Veterans rated less than 100 per cent disabled would have their dependency allowances reduced proportionately.

WASHINGTON SNAPSHOTS

BY JAMES PRESTON

Hot opposition to the government policy of repricing some 3,000 war contractors—arbitrarily reducing the price of goods still to be manufactured and delivered to the armed services—is developing both in Congress and among businessmen.

The very term "repricing" falls into the "something new has been added" category, and might be likened to the housewife who orders the milkman to reduce the price of milk if he does not want her to seize his cows. Advance repricing is compulsory and can be ordered as soon as a contract is signed. Although repricing is a complete violation of the contract, it is backed up by government power to seize the manufacturer's plant. Compulsory repricing is in addition to renegotiation of any excessive profits after fulfillment of the contract.

Even the veteran Chairman Doughton of the powerful House Ways and Means Committee has questioned the necessity of such procedure. Some Republican members of the committee charge flatly that repricing in the case of companies selling less than $500,000 is an evasion of the law specifically exempting them from all renegotiation.

Rep. Doughton revealed his attitude toward the program when Undersecretary of War Patterson testified that 650 companies had been repriced, that repricing discussions are under way with another thousand, and that the program includes an estimated 3,000 war contractors.

Cupping his hand behind his ear in a characteristic gesture, and thrusting his white-fringed head slightly forward, the committee chairman raised the question of whether both renegotiation and repricing are "not more of an ordeal than a contractor ought to be put to." It seemed, he said, that experts fitted by experience for repricing contracts should be doing something more vital to the war effort than repricing contracts and later renegotiating them.

In Congress since 1911 and long known as a champion of a square deal for the taxpayer, Rep. Doughton has become a power in Washington. Businessmen who feel that taxes are sufficient insurance against profiteering hope the North Carolina veteran will take a definite stand against compulsory repricing.

An Inspiration

Perhaps not many of our great men were actually born in log cabins, but many of our leaders, past and present, came from average American families with little cash to spare. If you have been thinking that the day is past when the small town poor boy could grow to be President of the United States, Harry Truman will renew your faith.

His life story is as American as George Washington. Whatever Verdier history may give on the success of his administration (and we hope and believe it will be a good one), his rise to the Presidency and, his unassuming modesty during his early days in office should be an inspiration to all who believe that success belongs to those who stick on their jobs and are loyal to their fellow men.

Once more we must be grateful that we have the right and the opportunity to reach for success. That we may pick our own type of work then try to improve ourselves and fit ourselves for better places in life. Our futures are limited only by our own capacities and by our ambitions. Let us keep our aims high.

Business Profit Shrinks

That the "profit has been taken out of war," as Congress wished, is proved by the average profit margin of American business, which has been narrowing since 1942.

Whereas net income was 4.5 per cent of gross sales in 1942, it was approximately 3.1 per cent in 1944. Ordinarily, profit margins in business widen as the volume of sales increases because overhead and costs per unit then decline. However, increased taxes, wages and other costs have narrowed profit margins since 1942 so that the profit per unit of sales has actually declined while gross sales have expanded.

The 3.1 per cent of sales realized in 1944 is, in fact, the lowest since 1942 so that the profit per unit of sales has actually declined while gross sales have expanded.

The 3.1 per cent of sales realized in 1944 is, in fact, the lowest since 1938, and demonstrates the modest profit on sales American industry has received for its war production.

Q. Does the government provide seeing-eye dogs for blind veterans?

A. An act of May 24, 1944, provides for seeing-eye dogs and mechanical or electronic equipment for blind veterans. For further information contact the Service Officer of your nearest Disabled American Veterans Chapter.

A. The mustering-out payment act has been amended to permit payment in cases of mentally disabled veterans to "the proper persons." Payment now also can be made to surviving minors, without legal representative.

Q. Is every wartime veteran entitled to government hospitalization?

A. Yes, but he must be recommended for hospital care by his own physician and authorized by the Veterans Administration to report for treatment before he can proceed to a government hospital. He will be admitted only if in need of hospitalization.

Q. I was discharged from the army and left some valuable papers on an army transport. Please tell me how I can go about getting them.

A. The Effects Quartermaster, Army Effects Bureau, Quartermaster Depot, Kansas City, Mo., receives all lost or abandoned effects and valuable papers. Write him. Identify yourself and describe your lost articles.

New Enterprises Face Obstacles

New enterprises trying to get started under present tax laws face almost unsurmountable obstacles, declares Leslie Gould, financial writer.

The government is cutting itself in for from 50 to 80 per cent of net profit, with the average "take" around 65 per cent. Mr. Gould points out, adding that "it would not be possible for a Henry Ford, a Walter Chrysler, a Cyrus McCormick, an Andrew Carnegie, a Charlie Schwab, a Dow, a du Pont, a Cyrus Field, a Harriman—just to name a few who made this country — to found an industry."

"Yet if this country is to provide jobs in private enterprise," the financial writer declares, "there must be an incentive to take risks and to expand and develop new products and new industries."

The Asheville (N.C.) Times reports that more than half of the patients now at the U. S. Veterans hospital at Oteen, N. C., are veterans of World War II. Dr. Frank B. Brewer, manager of the hospital, said that additional wards are being converted for the use of women patients.

What Is Important

The ignoble death of the once great dictator Mussolini preaches a strong, stirring sermon. The very people who cheered him with all vim and vigor when he was at the top of his power spat on him and trampled his mangled body a few days ago.

The fact that Mussolini lived and died is relatively unimportant. The fact that an individual such as Mussolini could ride rough-shod over bodies and principles to such great power is important and distressing. The importance of what happened in Italy before, during and following Mussolini's reign extends beyond the confines of Italy or Europe.

It is reported now that Hitler is dead. As in the case of Mussolini, his life and death are not so important, but again it is of vital importance that millions of people would permit themselves to be turned into brutal animals by following such a man. That importance too extends beyond Germany and Europe.

We have had no duplicates of Hitler or Mussolini in this country. We have had, however, opportunists who have been willing to forget principles and to forget the welfare of the people in order to gain power and to promote their own particular ideologies or doctrines. Some of them also have been rabble-rousers, such as were Hitler and Mussolini. Some of them have been able to obtain sizeable followings. Fortunately, however, thus far the average man of this country has had too much intelligence to be sucked into any type of mass movement as was the average man of Italy and Germany.

Although we have thus far been able to escape the dangers of any mad movement, that is not to say that we are 100% immune to such a movement. However, if the people of this nation will review the careers of Hitler and Mussolini, will study their doctrines and will study the birth, development and the death of their movements and try to apply the conclusions that naturally are arrived from such studies to this nation, we believe that we will be in better position to avoid any chance of dictators in this country.

Just how history will write the stories of Hitler and Mussolini, we do not know. We do hope, however, that these men as individuals will be deemphasized so that the fate of the people who are blindly led by unprincipled rabble-rousers can be emphasized. In other words, we again repeat, Hitler and Mussolini are unimportant. What happened to the Italian and German people and, because of them, the rest of the world, is extremely important.

THIS BUSINESS OF LIVING

BY SUSAN THAYER

Our town is a good place to live, Aunt Matilda and I agreed, strolling home in the golden sunset. We were enjoying the fruit trees in blossom, the lacework on the maples.

It's a good place because of the wide streets beneath overarching trees, the park, the new school. The neat shops with their summer awnings. The churches of many faiths. Our local paper that sets a high standard for news and responsibility.

It's a good place because most of us live in about the same sort of houses, wear the same kind of clothes, see the same movies. The mayor, the banker, the laundry driver and I all went to school together.

And it's a good place because its prosperity is based on dozens of small, going enterprises. The men who run them have their headaches. Running a business that you and others depend on for livelihood is no picnic. But they're free men, doing the work they've chosen, and given half a chance they'll fight through to security and independence.

This is our town—hundreds of towns on the prairies, in New England, the South and across the Rockies. There are many things we can improve. But let's never tear down what we have in ignorant admiration of foreign models that never were intended for America.

Former Vice-President Marshall once said, "What this country needs most today is a good five cent cigar". The homeseekers of our community have been saying, "What people want most of all are suburban homesites large enough to enjoy a feeling of freedom". We have heeded this request in our planning of Franklin Acres. Tracts range from 250 feet to over 500 feet in depth.

Franklin Acres is located near the well known Bessemer High School. Regular bus service is available. We believe in this fast growing section and predict for it a healthy boom. No City Taxes.

SPORTS 'n STUFF

TOMMY WARD

President Truman has called on all the people of the United States to plant more Victory Gardens to augment the nation's food supplies for home use and for the hungry peoples in the liberated areas. Truly there is a greater need for more and better gardens than at anytime since the war started. Every back yard in these villages should have something to eat planted in it. With most of our parents working at public work, I'm sure they would be willing to turn the garden over to the children, and after all I think we would feel kind of proud to see the fruits of our labor this summer; and take it from me, it's much easier and quicker to go to the garden than to the store several times a week.

All of you baseball fans have probably noticed that Wes Ferrell, manager of the Greensboro Patriots, has been pounding that old baseball at a terrific clip the last two weeks. Wes hits that old baseball long, hard and often. When Wes was at his peak as a major league pitcher, he was used regularly as a pinch hitter when not pitching. The records show that Wes did not disappoint the management or the spectators in this part of the game.

The cool weather for the past couple of weeks has slowed up tennis and baseball practice, but with the sun beginning to shine again, we expect a large number out each afternoon. One night I saw the lights on and a hot game of croquet going on down in Herman Hinshaw's back yard court. True to my predictions, those Hinshaw fellows are hard to beat, tho some of the ladies are pretty good competition.

The Navy does funny things: it has left another young high school graduate spending a long vacation at home waiting to be called. We are glad to keep you with us Buddy Brown, but I guess you will be glad when the suspense is over.

Urges Reduction Of Profits Tax

Reduction of excess profits taxes from 95 per cent to 65 per cent within six months after V-E day has been suggested to Congress by Walter Hoving, president of Lord and Taylor, New York, to provide an opportunity for business expansion and a guarantee of high employment.

Unless business has a chance to expand, Mr. Hoving declared, it will be impossible to attain the national job goal. To wait until Japan is crushed, he said, will be too late, but if the excess profits tax is modified in the near future businessmen will be able to plan a suitable program for employment.

Bill Proposes To Protect Trademarks

Backed By Business It Will Help Our Postwar Foreign Trade Rights

A bill to protect American consumers and help spread to the far corners of the world such familiar trademarks as "It Floats", "They Satisfy", and "His Master's Voice" is pending in Congress and is expected to become law within the next few weeks.

The measure backed by business generally will modernize our trademark law and adapt it to the needs of national and international advertising and sale of goods. If enacted it will take the place of present trademark statutes which are based on the obsolete concept of community and intra-state business.

The sponsor, keen, progressive, business-minded Rep. Fritz G. Lanham, of Texas, says the measure is essential if we are to achieve our goal of $10 billion of postwar foreign trade. His point is that this country has signed important treaties for worldwide protection of trademarks but has neglected to bring its own laws up to date, relying largely on state protection of trademarks instead of federal protection.

Expand Foreign Trade
Lanham's bill is designed to give better U. S. protection to trademarks and thereby assure better reciprocal rights for American products in foreign countries. This will expand foreign trade and make more jobs for Americans.

Note Cloth by Picker

At the end of the first week away from home on a new job, the young husband wrote to his wife: "Made foreman—feather in my cap." After the second week: "Made manager—feather in my cap." After the third week: "Made general manager—another feather." After the fourth week: "Sacked, send money." His wife telegraphed back: "Use feathers; fly home."

sign countries. This will expand foreign trade and make more jobs for Americans.

"Trademarks", according to Mr. Lanham, "encourage the maintenance of quality by securing to the producer the benefit of the good reputation which excellence creates. To protect trademarks, therefore, is to protect the public from deceit, to foster competition, and to secure to business the advantages of reputation and good will by preventing their diversion from those who have created them to those who have not."

Baby Ear of Corn: "Mamma, where did I come from?"

Bachelor Uncle—Baby six weeks old, you say? Talk yet?
Proud Father—Oh no. Not yet.
Bachelor Uncle—Boy, eh?

A lady was walking down a street when she came upon a crowd of children, standing around a cat. She asked them what they were doing.

"We're having a contest," said one. "Whoever tells the biggest story wins the cat."

"What a naughty competition," she cried, holding up her hands in horror. "When I was a little girl I never told an untrue story."

"Give her the cat!" shouted one of the girls.

Patient: I can't say why, but I get a sort of pain, I don't know where. And it leaves me in a kind of—sort of—well, I don't know.

Doctor: Here's a prescription for I don't know what. Take it I don't know how many times a day for I can't tell how long, and you'll feel better I don't know when.

Harduppe—"Darned if I understand banking."

Cashdown—"How so?"

Harduppe—"They lend you all the money you want as long as you can prove you don't need it."

Warning that the United States must maintain its sea power—both merchant marine and naval establishment—Admiral Ernest J. King, Commander in Chief of the United States Fleet, cited the lessons of two world wars when this country was twice caught without a proper force and said significantly, "But next time the penalty of forgetting may be the loss of America and liberty."
